The uniqueness of Zuha Hadid was in her style of work and the way she presented herself. She left a great imprint on the contemporary global architectural scene, and she is considered one of the most famous architecture engineers of her time.

Hadid's geometric designs are characterized by boldness, with a sense of fragmentation, instability and movement, and this deconstructive method led her to be classified among the leading architects of deconstructive architecture, which is considered one of the architectural forms that appeared in the twentieth century in America and Europe thanks to the use of design programs developed from the programs of the aircraft industry.

The deconstructive structure in engineering opposes the traditional logical structure, and she follows non-straight lines with multiple perspectives in her designs, to produce in the end a design based on distortion or disassembly of architectural lines, which goes hand in hand with philosophical and artistic deconstruction of the French thinker Jacques Derrida.

6. Joe Biden's Speech: Russia Invades Ukraine

Sorry to keep you waiting. Good afternoon. The Russian military has begun a brutal assault on the people of Ukraine without provocation, without justification, without necessity. This is a premeditated attack. Vladimir Putin has been planning this for months, as we've been saying all along. He moved more than 175,000 troops and military equipment into positions along the Ukrainian border. He moved blood supplies into position and built a field hospital, which tells you all you need to know about his intentions all along. He rejected every good faith effort the United States and our allies and partners made to address our mutual security concerns through dialogue to avoid needless conflict and avert human suffering. For weeks, we have been warning that this would happen and now it's unfolding largely as we predicted. In the past week, we've seen shelling increase in the Donbas, a region in Eastern Ukraine controlled by Russian backed separatists.
